

Dick,

This is the organization that Van's son, Todd Roberson, is involved with. Van's husband, Charles, is a retired UBC minister. These homes that were flooded were homes provided by this ministry to single moms, who for a variety of reasons are homeless and needing help. Some come with nothing. They stay and Gracewood helps them get back on their feet with shelter, education and whatever other needs they may have. Children at Heart also sponsors Miracle Farm in Brenham where they work with troubled youth. Google Children at Heart and it should tell you all about this. Would Rotary consider any donations to them to help replace clothing and household items lost in the flood? Van tells me many stories of the lives touched by these various ministries and they are definitely doing good work!
